Celebrating Women's History Month

An international labor poster exhibit from the private collection of

Stephen Lewis

Mr. Lewis said in a recent interview with the National Council on Public History, "As a trade union leader and a political activist, I had occasions to attend national and international events. Often, other attendees would bring posters from their respective organizations. I would usually take one of each because I was attracted to either the graphics or the issue or both. After a few years of this, and having obtained a critical mass, I decided to try to raise some modest funds for inexpensive frames and create a couple of exhibits. It seemed a shame to have these interesting posters sitting in my attic."

Flash forward fifteen plus years and 8,000 posters later, we are pleased to feature this ever-relevant and unique collection of posters in celebration of Women's History Month.

Reception/Gallery Talk: March 28, 12:00-2:00

Co-hosted with the Women's Resource Center
