Radiant Jasmin - A Life in Full Color

Radiant Jasmin of Randolph, is a multi-media visual and performing artist and educator featured during National Black History Month. Her colorful palette extends across upbeat works, affirming hope for humankind. Many of the paintings, vitreous enamel on copper panels & books in this exhibit are work from her new "Words to Live By" series. At the reception, Radiant Jasmin will also be reciting some of her heartfelt poetry that is integrated into and inspired by her paintings. She studied at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston and The North Bennet Street School, and specializes in alternative healing modalities, working in hospitals & health centers. She also coordinates and teaches art programs using theater, jewelry making, painting and collage to children, teens and adults in schools, homeless shelters & community centers.
