

Ink Monkeys have a SENSation Day at the Fuller Craft Museum

February 21, 2011

The Ink Monkeys joined the fun at the Fuller Craft Museum's latest SENSation day event held on Monday, February 21st for school vacationers and their families. Over 200 backpacks were silkscreened by visiting 'wannabee' printmakers. The silkscreen design created by Kelliann Jarasitis of Stoughton was inspired by the Changing Waters installation by Nathalie Miebach currently on view at the Fuller. Kelliann, a future June 2011 fine arts graduate of the Visual Arts program, recently won the Arches Paper Award for her outstanding monotype print at the 7th Arches Student Print Show at the Danforth Museum in Framingham. The show is on view until May 1st.

The Ink Monkeys are a print collaborative made up of Massasoit faculty, alumni and student printmakers. The troupe members participating in SENSation day: Gisela Coy, Karen Hays, Kelliann Jarasitis, Charlie Lanphear, Nuriman Faris, Linda Dunn and special volunteer Monkeys: Olivia Jarasitis, Nurayn & Nursalmi Faris.
